The History of the Deep Springs Community

"A home of classic rural splendor," according to Harvey Dinkins, is the home of the late Mr. and Mrs. Tamerlane Lindsay. Deep Springs is so named because of a spring so deep that the bottom has never been reached. The house is set in the midst of several acres of landscaped terrain in a magnificent grove and has a large flower and vegetable garden.

The house was long occupied by James Scales and his wife, who was a Timberlake. About 1880 it was sold to Mr. John M. Lindsay and occupied by him, his oldest son William, his wife and baby, Avila Lindsay. After two years, William moved to his home near "The Mount" across the Dan River, two miles from Madison. Tamerlane Lindsay and his wife, Rhoda Scott Lindsay, occupied the house until a few years ago, when Mr. Lindsay passed away, and more recently Mrs. Lindsay also. Their other two children were Mrs. Annie Scott Lindsay Lockett of Winston Salem and David Lindsay of Charlotte. The Lindsays were charming hosts and Mrs. Lindsay and her daughter were delightful conversationalists. Mrs. Lindsay was a great lover of nature and a writer of poetry. She was the sister of Mr. Hugh Scott, lawyer and banker of Reidsville. In the parlor was a life size, full length oil portrait of Mr. Scott, painted in Italy. There was an oil painting of her aunt Annie Settle Reid over the mantel. Among the many cherished keepsakes were two cups, the remainder of a set of china given to Mrs. Lindsay's mother, Rhoda Reid Scott by the little Giant, Stephen A. Douglas.

This home was bought by the Armfields who restored the old home before he died.

The History of the Deep Springs Golf Course

Chartered in 1969, Deep Springs Country Club is set on approximately 750 acres, surrounded by gorgeous rolling fairways and greens for hours of fabulous golf.

Deep Springs Country Club was the "brain child" of a few men and women located in rural, western Rockingham County, North Carolina. Originally a plantation home dating back to the late 1800s, the land was pristine and perfect for a beautiful, country-club setting. Several prominent businessmen and women who were western Rockingham County residents, along with several other leaders in the community during the late 1960s, envisioned a recreation facility for the citizens of Rockingham County equal to that of any private, country-club community. They purchased the land of the old Lindsay Plantation in 1969 and began work on selling the idea to the community in order to begin construction in 1970. The Olympic-sized swimming pool and 2 tennis courts opened first, with holes 10 through 18 opening for their first golf rounds on Saturday, May 1, 1971. Holes one through nine were opened in 1978 to make the course more beautiful and challenging. Roads and homes have been continuously built since the early 1970s, in addition to a new and renovated clubhouse in 1989.

Today, Deep Springs is a centerpiece for Rockingham County, hosting numerous golf and social activities throughout the year, serving the people of Rockingham, Guilford, Stokes, Caswell, Forsyth, and Henry counties. We extend a warm welcome to all members and potential members to come and enjoy our beautiful facility.
